

WORKSHOP

CO-LEARNING BY CO-DOING: BRIDGING TOP-DOWN & COMMUNITY-LED MONITORING

8:30 AM to 12:00 PM

Tuesday, 17 November

Darwin Convention Centre

$115 Member
$125 Non-Member

REGISTER NOW

Themes and de-identified contributions from the workshop discussions may be analysed and contribute to a research paper. By registering for this workshop, you are agreeing for your de-identified contributions to be included in this research. Further information, will be provided following registration.

How can technology and data bridge different priorities for caring for Country?

This interactive workshop explores how “co-learning by co-doing” can help bridge top-down monitoring and reporting requirements with Indigenous community-led priorities for caring for Country. Drawing on examples from across northern Australia, we’ll explore how digital tools and data can support collaboration and shared learning.

Participants will share experiences and identify what helps make monitoring useful and locally relevant, from planning and data collection through to interpretation and use. Together, we’ll identify practical lessons for navigating different priorities and ensuring data collected on Country supports both local decision-making and broader monitoring needs.